Dependent Care FSA Benefit

What is a Dependent Care Flexible Spending Account (DCFSA)?

A dependent care flexible spending account is an employer-sponsored pre-tax benefit that allows you to set aside money into separate accounts to pay for qualified dependent care expenses. It is a part of the Flexible Spending Account program aimed at covering associated costs with dependent care expenses.

Why should I participate in a DCFSA?

A DCFSA can save you money, since your contributions are taken before taxes. The money you contribute to a DCFSA is exempt from most taxes, and can increase your take-home pay by an average of 30% of your annual contribution with tax savings.

What expenses are eligible for reimbursement?

Dependent care FSA reimburses you for eligible child expenses, including day care, before and after school care, preschool, and day camp. Continue to the next page for a complete list. DCFSA does not cover medical expenses for dependents, which is handled by the FSA option.

How do I contribute money to my DCFSA?

Sign up during Open Enrollment to contribute for the calendar year, or sign up during a qualifying event to contribute for the remainder of the year. Once you decide on an amount you want to contribute to your DCFSA, the amount you have selected will be deducted from each paycheck before taxes are calculated and the money put into your DCFSA.

Who is covered under dependent care FSA?

Dependent care is for qualifying children 12 years old or younger who share the same residence as you, or a qualifying dependent who is physically or mentally unable to care for themselves who shares the same residence with you and has income less than the Federal exemption amount.

How do I get reimbursed using my DCFSA?

One debit card will be issued to you automatically after you enroll which can be used with both healthcare FSA and dependent care FSA. You can also request one additional card in a dependent's name by contacting Erisa Administrative Services, Inc., or by submitting a Debit Card Request Form. Benefits debit cards can be used at the register when paying for eligible expenses.

If you don't have your card, you can file a claim along with your receipt showing your name, the name of your provider, services provided, amount, and date. Once approved, your reimbursement will be deposited into your bank account or a check will be mailed to you.

If I elected dependent care FSA last year, do I need to sign up again this year?

Yes. Both healthcare FSA and dependent care FSA elections need to be made every year, even if you want to elect the same amount. If you do not make a new election, your benefit will end at the close of the calendar year.

How soon can I start spending my DCFSA funds?

The dependent care FSA can only be reimbursed up to what you have contributed so far for the year, so you will be able to start spending after your first pay period deduction. You can also only be paid for services that have already been provided; no reimbursements can be made for future expenses.

What happens if I don't spend all my DCFSA funds by the end of the plan year?

Be sure to only allocate dollars for predictable dependent care expenses. Any unused funds at the end of the plan year can't be rolled over or refunded, also called the use-it-or-lose-it rule.

Your dependent care FSA does not have a grace period like FSA does. All funds must be used by December 31st of the plan year.

How much can I contribute?

Account	Minimum Contribution	Maximum Contribution
Dependent Care FSA	$130	$5,000/Filing Jointly (2,500/Individual)

This reflects the current 2023 limit. The IRS announces changes to the annual contribution limit each October. You may opt to increase your election to the maximum contribution during Open/Switch Enrollment if it increases. Please note that the household limit is $5,000. So if both parents have a dependent care account, they can each enroll in $2,500, but if only one parent has an account they can elect $5,000. This form will be updated once the IRS announces the new limits.

What happens to my dependent care FSA if my employment is terminated?

Participation in your FSA is also terminated. This means that only expenses that were incurred prior to your termination date are eligible for reimbursement.

What is the deadline for submitting claims?

Your deadline to submit claims for both Health FSA and Dependent Care is March 31st of the year following your FSA enrollment. If your employment ends in the middle of the year, you have up to 90 days after your termination date to submit claims for services incurred while you were still employed. Dependent care expenses must be incurred within the plan year (no later than December 31st).

How do I determine the date my expenses were incurred?

Dependent care expenses must reflect a date of payment for services rendered within the plan year and already received. If you pay for a future date of services then it cannot be reimbursed until the services have been received, and documentation must clearly identify the date services will be provided within the plan year.

What sort of documentation do I need to submit?

Documentation should identify the date of services rendered, amount of expense, and type of service rendered. In most cases a valid Tax ID will also be needed. If the service provider does not identify that the service provided matches eligible service types it may be rejected.

If you are uncertain if the service may qualify for dependent care FSA reimbursement please contact Erisa Administrators to inquire.
